The State School Aid Bill

It is not possible for the Wisconsin voter to determine with the naked eye whether the action of the Republicancontrolled Legislative Council the other day in endorsing a $28,000,000 boost in the already big budget for state school aids was motivated wholly by concern for education, or whether there was also a desire to put the newly elected Democratic governor on the spot.

Mr. Calvert and the other men pushing for this liberalized state school subsidy budget have a record of long espousal of a more generous schedule of state support. At the same time, it is perfectly plain that Gov.-Elect Reynolds must worry about the enormous budget deficit that impends and for which he will be held responsible, and that this will serve to compound his problem and add to his

Assuming that this higher aid program is approved, and that the other additional appropriations demanded by the operation of the existing law in relation to growing corollments are granted, the real property faxpayer can look forward to a slight reduction in his school taxes for the next two years, at best, or a stabilization of that tax liability, which is more likely.

No doubt that will be a welcome thing for farmers, homeowners, businessmen and others to whom the property tax burden is an increasingly pressing fact of political life.

But in the present Madison situation, with multi-million dollar sums being demanded for scores of other purposes for which money is not available under present tax laws, there is something unreal about the proposition.

Where will the additional money come

It may be that the Republican legislative leaders who put their position on the school tax issue on the record the other day intended to provide another oblique reminder of the paramount issue in state politics today-which is tax revision.

Their own position is crystal clear. Most of these men repeatedly voted for the general sales tax, with exemptions, as a tax reform measure during the 1961 legislative session. Most of them were reelected this fall, with that voting record clearly known to their constituents. Surely the Democrats spared no pains to remind the electorate of the issue and the record attending it.

The only question remaining in Madison, with respect to a decision on basic tax revision, is the attitude of Mr. Reynolds. He says he doesn't want a sales tax, and will veto such a bill if it is sent to him by the legislature. It will be up to him to present a workable alternative, to yield $100,000,000 more for budget purposes as a bare minimum, and more if such goodies as higher school aids are going to be authorized.

To Strengthen College Training

Are the criteria for student admissions to college too narrow? Is the atmosphere of college life so hurried and frenzied that the student does not have "the calm that is necessary for serious, contemplative study, or that is essential to fruitful discussion, or that is needed if individuals are to be able to follow their interests?"

Are the examination procedures on which grades are based failing to motivate students for true scholarship? Is the work of the student so scheduled in detail day by day that he has little opportunity for initiative and little responsibility to pursue his own education through his own interests?

President Howard R. Bowen of Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, believes these are the weaknesses of colleges today and indicates where there is opportunity for improvement.

Dr. Bowen discussed this matter with the faculty and students of Grinnell at the beginning of this college year. He went to some pains to point out that he is well satisfied with the progress that has been made at Grinnell in students, staff, curriculum, educational program, extracurricular affairs and the facilities of the college which he notes have reached the level of excellence. But in spite of this he believes that opportunities for improvement are open to Grinnell College as well as to many others of high standing.

In discussing the problem he refers to the "tyranny of numbers." He complains that the present system tends to reduce everything about a student to a few key numbers. For example, he says, a student may be described as "35th in a high school class of 280, be scored 553 on the verbal and 610 on the quantitative college board tests, his college grade-point average was 2.85 and he scored 575 on the graduate record examination." Those few numbers, he points out, tend to tell all that is necessary about a student. There is no nonsense, he says, "about his curiosity, his moral fiber, his dreams and aspirations, his social consciousness, his human decency, his imagination, his philosophy of life, or his aesthetic sensibilities."

Dr. Bowen regards these qualities as of great importance but he notes that they are overlooked or ignored by the tyranny of numbers in the description of the stu-

He notes also that the tyranny of numbers extends even to the college itself which often is described in terms of the average college board scores of incoming freshmen, the average rank in high school of incoming freshmen, the percentage of students dropping out before graduation. the percentage of graduates who go on to advance study, the percentage of graduates who are listed in Who's Who, the faculty-student ratio, etc.

While Dr. Bowen acknowledges the importance of academic aptitude in selecting students for college training, he nevertheless is inclined to believe that the admissions are based too heavily upon the mere skill in taking multiple choice and other so-called objective tests. He believes that perhaps 50 places in the Grinnell freshman class should be reserved for students who do not fully measure up to the present academic tests but who may show signs of excellent in other dimensions.

He believes that students with the aspects of personality which are most highly desired can be found through recommendations by teachers and through careful interviews. These students, he says, should be admitted and their progress carefully studied so that the colleges may learn over a period of years by trial and error how to select worthy students who are not top performers in multiple choice tests.

He suggests that the number of credits required for graduation should be reduced to leave a substantial amount of time to be filled in by the student either by taking courses for credit by auditing courses or by independent study. He proposes that the student not only choose the subjects but also choose the mode in which the subjects are to be pursued. He believes that the test of scholarship should be based on things that scholars do such as "formulating hypotheses, gathering data, criticism, synthesis, problem solving, establishing new relationships and seeking new insights." And the test of accomplishment should be in the form of reports prepared without strict time limit and with access permitted to all notes and sources.

Students pursuing work on their own would be required to keep a record of their years at college which would indicate their reading during the period, copies of the papers and examinations written and the list of activities. This would be but one of the documents to be submitted and reviewed at the time of the oral section of his senior examination.

There was much more in Dr. Bowen's talk but essentially he is in search of scholars. He wants to teach students how to study, how to search out facts and how to report on their findings. It is an interesting proposal and one which could have good results. It should be especially valuable in preparing students for advanced work where such qualities are essential.

Any Disrupting of Status Quo Is War Mongering in Soviet Mind

BY DAVID M. NICHOL Chicago Daily News Service

BONN - The Soviet Union is plugging away in the United Nations at one of its pet projects - laws to make war-mongering a major crime punishable by heavy prison sentences.

The idea has a certain appeal. and it is worth having a look at the way in which such measures have been applied where they already exist.

Communist East Germany is an excellent example, and the lesson to be drawn is striking.

In the wake of the Communist military invasion of South Korea in 1950 there was a massive campaign by the Communist sponsored "world congress for peace." At a rally in Warsaw this congress urged the adoption by all countries of specific laws against "war propaganda in every form." The resolution was similar to that now proposed by the Soviets to the U. N.

Student Sentenced The East German regime was one of the first to comply. Its hand-picked legislature approved in December, 1950, a "law for the protection of peace" with penalties including the death sentence ' for severe violations."

One 18-year-old student actually was sentenced to death about this time, although his "crime" was committed before the law was enacted. There was such a public uproar that the sentence subsequently was reduced to 15

With do-it-yourself printing set, the student had turned out two small batches of leaflets, opposing the "elections" of October, 1950, in which the Soviet zone citizens were asked to approve a single list of candidates, with no alternative choices.

While he was distributing the leaflets one night, the youth was stopped by two policemen. He is said to have drawn a knife. Testimony at the trial showed he was slugged unconscious before he could use it

The court found the youth was acting, both in his opposition to the system and his resistance to the police. "in the sense of the Western war mongerers,"

100 YEARS AGO Quoted from the Appleton Crescent for Dec. 13, 1862.

The Oshkosh Review says The manufacture of lumber is probably the controlling branch of the business of the city. At least there is no other branch of bustness that approximates it in point of value.

This branch of our manufactures consists of 16 mills—all тил by steam—and not one of them that turns out less than 2.000,000 feet per annum. Some of these mills have been in operation for 10 or a dozen years, during which time some have been destroyed by fire and re-

County's Practices Will be Examined by Corporation Counsel

Criticism of Outagamie County's liability insurance buying practices by an Appleton insurance agent has resulted in a study which will be made by Corporation Counsel A. W. Ponath,

At a meeting of the county board's Public Property and Insurance committee this morning, Ponath recommended that a study be made of the county's insurance counseling practices.

The study will examine possible new plans and specifications which would be used in advertising for bids on the county's liability insurance.

Ponath will make his report to the committee at its January meeting.

Standard Specifications

The criticism of the insurance buying practices came from Robert Carew, who claimed the county has not been advertising for bids on the liability insurance contracts as they come due. Arthur Coffey, representing the Coffey Insurance Agency, has been handling county insurance for sev-

SAN FRANCISCO - The Packers have real championship class . . Make no mistake about that

They proved their right to the 1962 Western Division title by winning under terrifying conditions thrown up by the 49ers and 53 769 Packer haters in Kezar Stadium Sunday and don't forget the final score 31-21

Behind by counts of 14-2 and 21-10, the Packers won this bitter battle on pure determination and appropriately the touchdown that put the Packers in front for good was a 2-yard smash by "Mr Determination", himself - Jim Taylor in the fourth quarter. The defenders, bless em did
